Narrative
In pursuit of the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) of reducing poverty, concerted efforts by the government have been mounted to contribute to the realization of this goal. The past poverty reduction initiatives emphasized the importance of the role of local stakeholders in directly addressing key poverty issues.

The Localizing Poverty Reduction Programme works on the premise that the convergence of government services and poverty alleviation efforts at the local levels shall be ensured. Specifically, the participatory and multi-stakeholder approaches in planning, decision-making, implementation, monitoring and evaluation shall be strengthened and institutionalized.

Harnessing the direct and continued involvement of the local stakeholders therefore to address long standing issues of poverty require a systematic process of localizing poverty reduction initiatives that would also give way to a meaningful convergence of the government, non-government and private sectors initiatives. This systematic process of localizing poverty reduction effort aims to install the processes of adequate, efficient and prompt delivery of basic services for the poor.
